Dr. Iva Lloyd, ND is the current (and first) president of the World Naturopathic Federation and is the international representative of the Canadian Association of Naturopathic Doctors. Based in Toronto, Dr Lloyd, ND has maintained an active naturopathic practice since 2002 and is the Clinical Director of Naturopathic Foundations Health Clinic. Based on her interest in naturopathic history, professional formation and naturopathic principles she has written four books, over 30 research articles and is an international speaker on naturopathic medicine and the causal factors of disease. She is also editor of the website www.ndhealthfacts.org an education site for health professionals and the public.

Dr. Amie Steel, ND, PhD is a Senior Research Fellow at the Australian Research Centre in Complementary and Integrative Medicine within the School of Public Health, Faculty of Health at University of Technology Sydney, Australia. In addition to her naturopathic and research training, Dr Steel also holds qualifications in public health, and health economics. Her research interests include women's health – with a particular focus on pregnancy, fertility, and preconception health – and complementary medicine. With over 200 research publications and three edited books, her methodological interests encompass mixed methods research, implementation science, knowledge mobilization, applied health services research, and practice-based (pragmatic) clinical research.

Prof. Jon Wardle, ND, PhD is Director of the National Centre for Naturopathic Medicine and Professor in Public Health at Southern Cross University, Australia. He has published over 200 research publications and has leadership positions in public health organizations in Australia and the United States. In addition to clinical qualifications in naturopathy and nursing, he has postgraduate qualifications in public health, law and health economics. He works on traditional, complementary, integrative and Indigenous medicine, public health and primary health care policy with numerous governments, non-government organizations and international bodies.
